NOTES.—For other items of expenditure than those in the subsistence, purchasing, and medical and hospital departments, see the body of the report. In addition to the appropriation for the service of the militia, the Seminole war caused an increase of disbursements under some of the regular heads of appropriation, the exact amount of which cannot be ascertained without dissecting most of the accounts of the disbursements in that quarter, during its operation. The principal increase of disbursements was on account of subsistence. It is believed that the sum proposed to be deducted is ample.

The year 1818 is assumed instead of 1817, the year preceding the present organization of the staff of the army. It would have been desirable to have formed the table on the data to be furnished by that year, but, on examination, it was found, that some items of expenditure, growing out of the late war, were so blended with the current expenditure of that year, as to render the separation impossible, without great labor and much time. It is believed, however, that, could the current expenditure of 1817 be ascertained, the result would be not less favorable. It is proper to observe, that, although the act modifying the staff, as it is now organized, passed in April, 1818, it did not go into operation so as to produce any material effect on the disbursements until after the termination of that year.

The full effect of the present organization, it is believed, is not yet experienced; as it requires considerable time to carry into perfect operation a system which comprehends so great an extent of detail. As far as can be judged by the estimates for 1821, the disbursements of that year will show a still more favorable result than that of this year.

A TABLE containing, 1st, the Present Organization and Force of the Army; 2d, the Proposed Organization at its Minimum; 3d, the Proposed Organization raised to its Maximum, but without doubling the Battalions or augmenting the number of Officers; 4th, the Maximum to which it can be raised, in case of necessity, by doubling the Battalions and Officers of Infantry.

The number of matrosses may be increased, if absolutely required, but, by recurring to the preceding table, it will be seen that the present 45 companies, at 100 men each, can serve 90 guns in the field and 1800 in forts and batteries.

LECTURE

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY

THIRTEENTH

in relation to a report to the House of Representatives of the 10th

THE OFFICES OF THE CUSTOMS

which may be assigned without prejudice to the State Treasury

DECEMBER 12, 1880

Read and referred to the Committee on Commerce

PRINTED BY THE SENATE

1880

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,

9th December, 1820.

SIR: In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives, of the 15th of May, 1820, directing the Secretary of the Treasury "to report to the House, at the next session of Congress, such offices of the customs as may be properly suppressed on account of their inutility, or from any other cause," I have the honor to report a list of offices, which, it is believed, may be abolished without detriment to the public interest.

The information upon which this report is founded was submitted to the Senate of the United States, on the 2d day of December, 1818, with the list hereto annexed, in conformity with a resolution of that honorable House, and may be referred to in No. 27 of the reports of the second session of the fifteenth Congress.

In the collection of the revenue, persons are employed to weigh, measure, guage, and mark, all merchandise imported into the United States susceptible of these different operations, the fees for which are defined by law, and form a large item in the expenses of collection.

It is ascertained, that, for these services, there was paid, during the year 1819, the sum of $116,426 71. It is also ascertained, that, in one of the principal ports, these services are performed exclusively by the inspectors, who receive three dollars a day, throughout the year, for their services as inspectors. The law, regulating the compensation of the inspectors of the customs, authorizes the allowance of three dollars a day, for the days that they are actually employed. But they cannot be considered as actually employed as inspectors every day in the year, when, during the same time, they are employed as weighers, measurers, guagers, and markers, and actually receive for such services about 2,400 dollars a year.

In several of the ports, the inspectors have voluntarily offered to perform, without compensation, such services. It is confidently believed, that the inspectors employed in the several districts of the United States, at this time, are entirely competent to discharge these duties, in addition to those now required of them. The abolition of the fees for weighing, measuring, guaging, and marking, will reduce the expenses of collection, at least 100,000 dollars a year; whilst the abolition of the offices presented in the list annexed to this report will not reduce it more than about 8,000 dollars. It is, therefore, respectfully submitted, that it is expedient to repeal so much of the second section of the act "to establish the compensation of the officers employed in the collection of the duties on imports and tonnage, and for other purposes," passed March the 2d, 1799, and of all other acts which allow fees for weighing, measuring, gauging, and marking of merchandise or packages imported into the United States, and that those services be rendered by the inspectors of the customs.

I remain, with respect,

Your most obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

The Honorable JOHN W. TAYLOR,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

A LIST of the offices in the Customs, with the names of their officers; the salaries, emoluments, and places where held, which it may be proper to suppress and discharge, in consequence of their unproductiveness, the inconsiderable service rendered, or of any other cause; exhibited in obedience to a resolution of the Senate, of the 16th of April, 1818.
